Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Tuesday 06 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cold. Frosty tonight. Wintry showers dying out Wednesday, winds easing.

This Evening and Tonight:
Wintry showers continuing to affect some exposed western areas, the odd one just clipping a few eastern coasts, bringing ice risk. Northern Scotland seeing slight further snowfall in places. Elsewhere clear with a sharp frost. Windy along North Sea coasts.

Wednesday:
Wintry showers should become confined to northern Scotland, many other parts dry with some sunny spells although quite a lot of cloud by afternoon. Less windy and somewhat less cold.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Rain in the northwest on Thursday, largely dry elsewhere and less cold. Cloudy with some rain in the south, otherwise colder again from Friday with sunny spells and wintry showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.